BOSRA SHAM RETIRED English Champion Three-Year-Old Filly Bosra Sham (Woodman) has been retired from racing, according to yesterday's Racing Post. Trainer Henry Cecil, who called the four-year-old filly the best horse he has ever trained, blamed chronic foot problems for the decision to end Bosra Sham's racing career as she was preparing to defend her title in next month's Dubai Champion S. "Due to the lack of time, the decision has been made to retire Bosra Sham," Cecil told the Racing Post. "This is an unbelievably sad occasion for all involved with the filly. But, due to recurring foot problems, we feel it's the best thing for her. Let us hope that she has a happy retirement and that she has some super foals. If they're half as good as she was, they will be a pleasure to train." Despite being plagued with troublesome feet throughout her three-year-old campaign, Bosra Sham won three of four starts, including the English 1000 Guineas and the G1 Champion S. In four starts this year, the filly won the G2 Prince of Wales' S. and G3 Brigadier Gerard S. In her final start, Bosra Sham finished fourth and last behind Singspiel (Ire) in the G1 Juddmonte International after losing a protective shoe in the race. She retires with seven wins in 10 starts, with one second and one third, for earnings of $931,444.

BARKERVILLE TO WAFARE Nathan Fox has announced that, following an agreement with Jorge Cardemil and Teresa Solari of Chile, MGSW Barkerville (Mr. Prospector--Euryanthe, by Nijinsky II) will stand the 1998 breeding season at Wafare Farm in Lexington, Kentucky. Wafare, in partnership with other central Kentucky breeders, has purchased the Northern Hemisphere breeding rights to the nine-year-old stallion and will stand him for $6,000, live foal. Barkerville, winner of the 1992 GII Fayette and 1993 GIII Tropical Park H. and in the money in 12 of 15 starts, was a leading freshman sire in South America this year.

CLASS GETS BY WITH SOME HELP FROM HIS FRIENDS

Class O Lad will never race again. The six-year-old Thoroughbred gelding's racing career came to an abrupt end when sponges that were stuffed up both of his nostrils sometime prior to his last race, June 14 at Churchill Downs, prevented the valiant claiming horse from even crossing the finish line.

Class O Lad's newest challenge won't be met on the racetrack, but on a farm in Goshen, Kentucky, where he has been fighting for his life after suffering from numerous health problems, including laminitis, as a result of the sponging, which has drawn the attention of Kentucky racing officials, the Kentucky Attorney General's office and investigators from the FBI.

Class O Lad, a victim of mankind at its worst, is bringing out the very best in a dedicated group of caretakers and well-wishers.

Since early July, Class O Lad has resided at Flying Cross Farm and has been cared for by Mary Lowry and a team of attendants. The gelding is showing signs of improvement. Lowry's farm specializes not only in training event horses and retraining Thoroughbreds for second careers, but also in equine rehabilitation. She took on Class O Lad not only because it is her specialty, but because she saw his case as a challenge and felt a responsibility to the horse. "We owe him a chance," she said. "As long as he indicates he wants to be here and can tolerate the pain and remains in good spirits, we'll keep trying with him."

Fate also played a role in Class O Lad's residence at Flying Cross. "I know one of the people who claimed him on the day of the sponging incident, Mr. Brenzel. He has a filly at my farm and knows the type of care we provide. I knew of this horse because one of my clients, Whitney Davis, had seen [Class O Lad] run and thought he'd make a great event horse. She came to me before all this happened and said, 'Oh Mary, we have to claim this horse.' So I was familiar with him."

Mr. Brenzel was approached after the incident by several people who offered to take the gelding off his hands and care for him. However, when the laminitis worsened, few were able to treat him. Brenzel had only three options: give the gelding to Lowry, donate him to the University of Kentucky or have him euthanized.

Under Lowry's care, Class O Lad now resides in an airy stall and has a special paddock Lowry built just for him off the barn. Lowry's hope is to get the horse well enough that he can be a child's pleasure-riding horse. The next six months, she says, are critical. In the meantime, the popular claimer, who posted 15 wins in 46 starts during his five-year career and earned $186,320, is well remembered by his fans, horse lovers and by members of the equine community, who are concerned over Class O Lad's welfare.

Since an article appeared in the Louisville Courier-Journal newspaper last month, according to Lowry, more than $3,500 has been donated to help save Class O Lad. "We've been very fortunate to get all kinds of donations, including veterinary services, hay, straw, farrier work—it's wonderful," she said. Class O Lad also has an equine masseuse and acupuncturist working on him. And he has plenty of visitors. "He's turned into quite a ham," Lowry said. "We put chairs outside his stall so people can visit with him."

Class O Lad has also received more than 250 cards and letters, which Lowry laminated and hung outside his stall. Lowry and her team are in the process of sending thank you notes to Class O Lad's many well-wishers, who come from all age groups. "One child sent drawings. The first showed a big red barn with a gray horse grazing in a big green pasture. The second drawing shows a police officer with gun drawn and a man in a black and white pinstripe prison uniform wearing handcuffs [ostensibly the sponger getting his/her just rewards]."

Lowry's favorite reads, "Dear Mary and Crew, I am a 90-year-old man. When I was younger I had a Quarter Horse named Bob. I know you'll understand this [enclosed] $5 is from Bob." Whenever the extraordinary effort of caring for Class O Lad gets the crew "a little down," says Lowry, we read that letter and it really encourages us.

"Many of the letters say how surprised people are to learn that we take such good care of our horses," she added. "I think it's important that the public sees how much we care for each horse as an individual; that they aren't disposable."

Lowry has set up a bank account for Class O Lad because so many people have asked how they can contribute to his care. Donations can be sent to Mary Lowry/FBO Class O Lad, 2114 Liberty Lane, Goshen, KY, 40026. cont. p. 6

The prognosis for Class O Lad is guarded, but the gelding's health continues to improve. An infection in his right front foot has cleared up; however, he still is suffering from laminitis, an inflammation of the hoof that causes the sensitive laminae (which line the inside of the hoof wall and contain blood vessels and nerves) to separate from the coffin bone, which is encased by the hoof. In serious cases, the coffin bone rotates downward into the sole of the horse's foot, resulting in extreme pain. The disease progresses rapidly and is often fatal. In Class O Lad's case, the right hoof is more serious than the left. The coffin bone rotated 10 degrees in the right hoof and six degrees in the left. But "he seems much better and now stands for half the day," Lowry reported.

Lowry is hopeful that she and the team working on Class O Lad can help other horses based on this experience. And, she says, "I really hope that whoever is responsible for the sponging incident will feel guilty and confess."

She is also touched that people recognize the valiance of Class O Lad. "This horse went out to the racetrack every day of his life and ran his heart out. He deserves the best we can give him." For now, that includes the very best medical care, as well as all of the peppermints, fruit, vegetables and yes, pizza, that the horse whom Lowry calls "spoiled rotten," wants.
