UNSUNG HERO OF A REAL ‘COVER' STORY

by Chris McGrath

For those of us who only seldom witness a Thoroughbred stallion in the throes of lust, hollering and snorting and shuddering, there’s always a sense of awe at the primal energies harnessed by Nature to meet the reproduction imperative. Presumably, then, even nearly four decades of seeing the same thing repeated again and again—with another new covering season imminent—will never quite stifle that wonder, that privileged connection with the very wellspring of life, the constantly recurring miracle of creation.

Put this to Richard Barry, however, and he gives you a bit of a look.

So between the acknowledged dangers of the environment, the need for composure and vigilance and skill, he doesn't feel any of that stuff at all?

"No, I don't," he says with a shrug. "I just want to get the horse to ejaculate. That's it."

Ashford’s vastly experienced stallion manager now offers a grin, as though to assure you that he can indulge such pretentious questioning in those who don’t literally put their necks on the line every day. For those who need to keep the horses and their handlers safe, however, these daily "miracles" represent the precarious ritual on which rest quite incalculable stakes.

EARNING THEIR STRIPES: KELSEY DANNER

Last year, we conducted a popular Q and A series called 'Smaller But Still Super,’ where we featured veteran trainers who have built a competitive racing stable with relatively small numbers (click here to view the archive). This year, we will highlight trainers who have already cut their teeth as novice trainers, but now have a few years of experience under their belts and are looking to make a name for themselves as they grow their stable. We’ll talk about the challenges that come with hanging out your single, advice for trainers setting out on their own, how the incoming class of young trainers differs from previous generations and more.

Kelsey Danner’s family has been a fixture on the racetrack for generations, so the horsewoman always knew she would dedicate her life to the industry. She started off working for her father Mark Danner, a trainer on the Kentucky circuit and at Oaklawn Park for nearly three decades, and later got experience under D. Wayne Lukas, Ian Wilkes and Carl Nafzger. She then spent five years as an assistant for Wayne Catalano. Cont. p7

KIP CORNETT PENS A LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The marketer urges the industry to support the efforts of HISA.

"That’s it," he repeats. "And get him out. It’s a very serious business. You’ll see the guys talking to each other, but they’re always concentrating on what they’re doing. There’s millions of dollars transacted up there every week. But you can’t be too intense, either, because the animals feel it. You have to be... I want to say relaxed, but you can’t relax around them at all."

So even with two Triple Crown winners on his current roster, extending a cavalcade of champion runners and sires over 38 years, Barry knows that the same flesh-and-blood unites every Thoroughbred, of every station, at the point where the blood is up, and the flesh tapers to lethal feet. He was still a young man, new to his vocation, when a shadow was cast that reaches to this day.

"I watched a guy die," he says. "John McGuigan. I found him. And that wasn’t in the breeding shed, he was bringing in mares and foals. One of the mares kicked him right over the heart and burst his aorta. That changed me. I give out to those guys up there, if ever I see them being lax."

That was at the old Murty Farm, where Barry cut his teeth before his recruitment by Coolmore. A rather different program, no doubt, from the one that has since given Barry such responsibility at the very pinnacle of the commercial breeding industry. But it all contributed to his education, no less than the Connemara stallion owned by his aunt back in Co. Dublin.

"The village where I was brought up, Clondalkin, is now part of the city," Barry says. "I couldn’t find my way round Dublin if I tried now, it’s gotten so big, but there were a number of small horse farms around the place when I was growing up and I must have been about 13 when I started hunting with the Co. Dublin Foxhounds. My aunt bred three-quarter-breds, stuff like that, she’d sell them on for show jumping. And then I used to ride out for a guy named Dave Blackford, he was a small trainer of jumpers round there. But I realized at an early age that I was never going to be a jockey, so I got onto the farm end of things."

So it was that in 1978 Barry became one of countless young compatriots to have used the Irish National Stud course as the springboard for a job in Kentucky. At the time Wayne and Duane Murty stood the likes of Bold Ruler’s son Top Command.

"Not big names, and I was more into mares and foals really," Barry recalls. "When I first started that’s what I wanted to do. I’d be lost now in a broodmare barn, veterinary work is so much more advanced: back in my time you palped them and hoped! Anyway I worked the stallion barn for the Murtys, I was always being pushed that way because they needed someone capable of handling them."

And, actually, that was pretty much how he came to be hired by Coolmore: he was 28, strong and fearless, and equal to a feisty young stallion. Cont.

"They had Storm Bird here at the time," he explains. "He was a bit of a boy and they needed someone to handle him. So I hired on here as stallion manager in 1985. That was the year he had Storm Cat running from his first crop. He finished second [by a nose to Tasso] in the Breeders' Cup Juvenile, if he'd won he was gone to Japan."

What dynasties Barry has helped to establish since then! He has worked on the most intimate scale imaginable with some of the great patriarchs of the modern breed. And while the essence of the whole job could not be more timeless, his career has meanwhile spanned sophisticated advances in the workplace: from veterinarian input to ventilation.

"The breeding shed alone," he agrees. "It's a castle compared to what we had when I came here. A black metal shed, and if it was 80 degrees outside it was 100 in the shed. Forty mares was a full book when I started, but we were still as busy then as we are today, because we were breeding the same mare maybe three times in a heat cycle."

Besides Storm Bird, Barry started out with El Gran Senor—a horse he still cherishes as much as any since under his care.

"He was with me the longest, and an absolute pet," he says affectionately. "Never gave me any trouble. Apart from the fact that he had a fertility problem! But he was a grand horse, gorgeous, I loved him. He was the opposite of Storm Bird, a child could handle him. Then Woodman came over the June of the first year we were here, he was much the same.

"Seattle Dancer was pretty quiet, too, though he was a funny horse. He'd keep you in the shed an hour in the morning. Yet by the evening, last mare of the day, he was an antichrist, he'd be coming in that door gangbusters. But he wasn't a morning person at all. Afternoon and evening, 35 seconds he'd be in and out, but mornings you had to let him figure it out. That's just the way he was." Cont.

Such are the priceless insights obtained through daily proximity into the humble, animal qualities that accompany equine greatness, be it achieved on the track or off it. And it’s that intimate bond, horseman to horse, that is key to this job: figuring out what makes each stallion tick as an individual, with all his quirks and insecurities.

The layman will often hear traits associated with the stock from particular lines. "But at one time we had eight grandsons of Storm Bird standing up there, and I only had one bad actor among them all," Barry reflects. "And he wasn’t that bad as far as I was concerned. He was tough, put it that way. Some of the others were tough too, but they were quiet animals. "You’re going to get some bad horses. But there are very few that are born mean. Generally they’re pretty quiet. I’ve had horses come in here with warnings and they’re quiet as lambs. They don’t come in to be mean, so you don’t make them mean.

You’ve got horses like Thunder Gulch, Dehere, [American] Pharoah, you raise your voice you’d hurt their feelings. But you’ve also got horses—like Storm Bird himself, Black Minnaloushe was another—they would get you if you gave them half a chance. Storm Bird got everybody that worked with him, including me: got me right there on the shoulder one night in the breeding shed."

But remember that Barry did not "start" that horse, who was already seven when he took him on.

"You can train an animal to do just about anything," he insists. "All it takes is patience. They’re all different. And every mare is different, too. Treat people as you find them, and horses the same." Cont.

Nor is it as though a particular disposition, for good or ill, denotes any kind of genetic potency.

"Otherwise we'd all be breeding for a certain type of temperament," Barry notes. "As it is, you had Halo, a renowned bad actor and a very successful stallion. And you have others without a mean bone in their body. Munnings, nobody expected him to turn into what he has, he's as quiet as a lamb. Giant's Causeway was okay. He was tough, not a horse that liked to be messed with: a 'manly' horse, that's the word. Though he hated the needle, absolutely despised it!"

Given the vivid theater of the breeding shed, and the inferences available from human experience, there is one aspect of a stallion's temperament guaranteed to invite curiosity: libido.

Barry witnessed the notorious celibate tendencies of Seattle Slew when he took boarding mares from Murty Farm to Spendthrift.

"I was in the shed one day with him and three other mares and the teaser, and we all went home without getting bred," he says. "It was a nightmare. And yes, you do get your horses that are slow to breed, absolutely. Sometimes I send them up to the broodmare barn and let them live with the mares a couple of weeks, it can just get them going. They all have their trigger. Ninety percent of them, though, once they figure out what you want them to do, they're good to go. Especially when they're young, they're like teenagers, there's no stopping them once they get into it: they forget about racetrack and everything else."

So come on then, tell us: who was the most ardent lover of them all?

"Shanghai Bobby jumps to mind," Barry replies. "You'd open the doors and through he came, and you'd better have that the mare ready. He went straight to that mare and bred her and was walking out before you had the chance to close the doors after him. He'd keel over before he'd refuse a mare. He's the only horse I've ever been around that got so excited that he forgot to ejaculate! But a lovely horse."

But if there are many moments of humor, Barry and his team never lose sight of the fact that things can go badly wrong if you drop your guard.

"Yes, and very quickly," he says. "So we all look out for each other. Horses can get tired, and men too. You have to trust the guy next to you. There are three of us here who've been together for years, and the young fellers just switch in and out. And with time we will each of us get like 'that' with particular horses."

He entwines his fingers to show the tightness of that bond.

"It's all training," he emphasizes. "If you can start a horse, it's constant training until they don't know any different. All those stallions up there, we've had since they were 4-year-olds, or backend 3-year-olds. They know they're supposed to do what they're told, and that's it, there's no grey area. It's attitude. And it's the same with the guys, over the years I've trained most of them up. The guy that's running the place now was a kid when he came in here. And all that makes me feel lucky in the job I have. Office work and all that, they can keep. I do what I do. I like hands on a horse."

After 12 years of working as an assistant, Danner made the decision to go out on her own in 2017. She only had 73 starts in her first two years, but got the ball rolling with 19 wins in 2019. Two years later, she surged past her first million-dollar mark with over $1.3 million in earnings, plus 36 wins, and then one-upped herself last year when she surpassed $2 million in earnings.

Danner is based at Palm Meadows in the winter, but travels throughout the year from Gulfstream to the Kentucky circuit, Colonial Downs, and more. With 45 horses under her care, Danner's highest earner is gearing up for her 3-year-old season. NBS Stable and Elements Racing's Danse Macabre (Army Mule) got her first stakes win at Kentucky Downs last summer and was third in the GIII Matron S. in her last start.

What has been the key to your stable's growth since you first opened?

My last few years have definitely been my best years. I'm a bit more content with where I'm at as far as the clientele and the horses I have. For the last three years, I got to have some nicer, young stock and they're still in my barn now, so it has been nice to watch them develop and I've gotten to win a few stakes races.

What do you think makes your training style unique?

I think a lot of my focus is on exercise riders. I have some really good riders and we do things a little bit different in the morning. We will do breezing with groups of four and five horses so that they will get hit with dirt. We spend a lot of time on their backs. Our sets take a little bit longer. We do less sets but for a longer period of time.

What has been the biggest thing you have learned since going out on your own?

Some of this I already knew because not only was I an assistant for years, but I was also the daughter of a trainer. I would say the biggest challenge initially is getting horses, and the second part is maintaining your expenses and your payroll. You need to make sure that you don't spend more than what you're bringing in. Cont.

Another important thing is having good-paying clients. They’re without a doubt the most important aspect of it and you learn that the hard way.

Do you think most trainers’ success is defined by their ability to train or by the quality of the horses they receive?

I would say it’s about the quality of the horse. You have to have the stock. It’s kind of a chicken-or-the-egg thing. The quality of the horse is pretty much the factor in everyone’s success, whether it is owners or trainers.

If you could give one piece of advice to someone going out on their own this year, what would it be?

(Laughs) Don’t do it. I guess it would be to have the experience before you do it. I think right now, with how the racing offices are struggling for entries to fill, be prepared with as much experience as you can get beforehand and make sure you have a decent-sized bank account.

I think a lot of times, you see with young trainers that they were only an assistant for maybe one trainer and only for a few years. Training requires a lot of experience. There are things that can’t be taught. There’s not a book on how to train horses. I think that the more experience you have before going out on your own, the better your chance of having mentors. New trainers need people you can call up and ask advice. By building relationships with people that you’ve worked for previously, that’s how you do it.

What is something that you think this incoming generation of trainers does better than the generations before them?

Probably embracing the digital age as far as communication with clients. Clients are more likely to receive videos, pictures, and text messages. I feel like when I was younger, a lot of owners lived near their horses and they would come out to the track more often. I think that now, technology is what the younger generation does more.

Last fall you became a member of HISA’s Horsemen’s Advisory Group. Why was that something that you wanted to be a part of?

I think that our industry is in the middle of a big change, hopefully for the better. It remains to be seen which way this is going to go, but I thought I would like to at least be part of what the change is going to be so that I could understand it a little bit more and maybe offer some advice or opinion.

Obviously racing need changes. Hopefully HISA is the organization that will help us have more uniform rules and things like that. It’s easy to knock it or to sit back and say that it won’t work. But I think that without change, we probably won’t make it. And it takes the whole industry to get there. So we do need change and I would like to be a part of it. The industry is my career and my livelihood and I hope it lasts for many years to come.

Who is your favorite horse that you’ve ever had in your stable?

I would have to go with Gladys (Medaglia d’Oro). She was a full-sister to Rachel Alexandra. She was very spirited and had a neat personality.

Is there an up-and-coming horse in your barn that we should know about?

I have a couple nice young horses. Danse Macabre, who won a stake at Kentucky Downs last year, is getting ready to get back next month. Dunedin (Munnings), who finished fifth but only got beat by a neck in the GIII Futurity S., comes back next month too.

What is your favorite restaurant to go to after a big win?

If you aren’t at the track, what can you be found doing?
Right now I’m in the middle of remodeling my house.

If one change was made to racing that would make your life easier, what would it be?
Probably if they got rid of statistics in the Racing Form. I do think it hurts the industry a little bit because you’re more likely to not help the racing office fill races because you’re worried about your statistics.

Carl Nafzger used to say that you needed to give a horse five races until you knew what the horse was. One going short, one going long, one on the slop, one from behind, etc.

What is your biggest hot take? It can be racing-related or completely random.
Winning first time out isn’t everything. I think it can sometimes damage a horse. There’s a lot of pressure that if a horse doesn’t win first time out, they’re not a very good horse because everyone is worried about percentages.

TDN: We understand you did not open your training barn this year and will not be consigning at the 2023 2-year-old sales. You are obviously headed in a different direction. Can you discuss where your focus will be?

KE: Correct, we’ve measured the market as we always have and determined a strategic shift for Kirkwood is in order. My wife Helen and I decided that the timing was ideal do things a little differently. We are going to concentrate more on the buy side of the equation. We plan to continue to develop a clientele for whom to buy horses to race either individually or in partnership. Later in the year we intend to be purchasing yearlings and 2-year-olds for clients to race. We will also continue our pinhooking partnerships, but I won’t be preparing or presenting them myself. All in the name of identifying attractive opportunities for the benefit of our clients. Cont.

TDN: You have an incredible amount of experience in the racing industry; buying, selling and preparing horses all over the world. Talk a bit about how your background as a consignor and lifelong horseman sets you apart as a buyer and advisor.

KE: I spent four decades preparing 2-year-olds for the sales and racing. Good horses, brilliant horses, average horses. Oh, and some slow ones too. They all give you signs of what they are. Whether in the U. S., Europe, South Africa, New Zealand, or other stamps on the passport, I've tried to bring them along with the disciplined approach of, well you said it, a horseman.

TDN: With all that experience you probably know your way around a horse better than most. What do you look for in a horse that you're buying to race?

KE: The most obvious is that they must show me they are capable of speed even if it is not a brilliant eighth of a mile. They have to be efficient and have the right attitude.

TDN: With all of the overseas business you have done over the years, can you talk a bit about the differences between the U.S. and say the European or South African or even the New Zealand market?

KE: In the UK and Europe your judgment has to be much more subjective since the breezing surfaces are not nearly as uniform as they are here. The South African market has had a more severe COVID setback than most and is really just getting started again. New Zealand is very different in that the horses breeze (quite often in pairs) in several different locations close to their home base and convene for the sale several weeks after they breeze. That is just a few differences for starters. Cont.
An understanding of these types of nuances has helped us uncover unique opportunities for our clients.

TDN: Our industry has not been short on controversy and people coming out of the woodwork to let the world know what needs to be improved. Talk about what is going right in our sport right now.

KE: There are great developments in veterinary medicine being made all the time. We are making progress even if it is painfully slow in uniform regulation and enforcement. Aftercare is spreading a much wider net. Aftercare and accountability of our equine athletes after racing continues to make tremendous forward progress.

TDN: With all that you have accomplished over the years, both for your clients and customers, what is one of the biggest lessons you’ve learned in the business?

KE: Patience (though I’m still working on that) and that the little things matter, often more than we think.

TDN: You have played a role in the careers of some incredible horses. Can you tell us a few you are most proud of?

KE: Mucho Gusto (Mucho Macho Man) comes to mind as one of the more recent and relevant success stories. We believed the colt’s value was significant and the early 2-year-old sale market just didn’t reflect that view. We pivoted to a later-season sale and our conviction on behalf of our client was rewarded. The buyers were of course rewarded too with a Pegasus World Cup winner.

Another one that was a lot of fun was Plum Pretty (Medaglia d’Oro). Our friends, John and Elizabeth Fort, live right down the road from us in Camden, and John always pulls out a few of my horses at the sale to inspect. As a 2-year-old, Plum Pretty was a bit of an ugly duckling to look at, but he had no trouble seeing her potential. I was as surprised as anyone when he bought her, because he never said a word about liking her that much, but it sure was fun and rewarding to watch the ride she took them on, winning the Kentucky Oaks and the Apple Blossom, among others.

TDN: This year is going to be much different for you than years past. What are you most looking forward to?

KE: What I am mainly looking forward to this year is the opportunity to go out and buy not just nice yearlings but also weanlings, broodmares and 2-year-olds for other people. Especially the 2-year-old sales that are coming up. For years as I have been preparing the 2-year-olds for the sales, I have seen the qualities that have separated the good ones from the rest. It will be fun now to go out and buy some of those good ones.

SURICK, FACING 62 MONTHS IN PRISON, APPEALS DOPING CONVICTION

by T.D. Thornton

The former Standardbred trainer Nick Surick, who was sentenced to 62 months in federal prison last month for his role as a "doping mentor" in a years-long scheme that eventually resulted in him pleading guilty to two counts of drug adulteration and misbranding and one count of obstruction, lodged an appeal of both his conviction and his sentence Feb. 7.

As TDN’s Bill Finley reported from Surick’s Jan. 19 sentencing in United States District Court (Southern District of New York), Surick was ordered to serve one of the longer prison terms among those convicted in the 2020 international racehorse doping series of arrests that involved both Standardbred and Thoroughbred trainers based in Florida and the Northeast.

And that harsh sentence was handed down despite Surick’s efforts to cooperate with prosecutors, who eventually decided that some of the information he offered was not credible and involved false accusations.

"I am truly sorry for the crimes that I have committed," Surick had said at his sentencing. "I can't blame anybody but myself."
KIP CORNETT

This Sunday is the biggest day in American sports--Super Bowl LVII. While I enjoy this annual ritual, I much prefer the first Saturday in May--or really any Saturday where there is great Thoroughbred competition to watch.

I grew up a bettor, then became a marketer and ultimately an owner in the sport. And all three of these experiences I've enjoyed immensely. And for the benefit of each, I applauded the efforts to finally, finally, finally bring Thoroughbred racing under the long-overdue establishment of uniform safety and integrity rules through the Horseracing Integrity and Safety Act.

I hate to say it, but I fully expected some corners of the industry to fight this. And they have. And they are only slowing down a train that badly needs to roll on to ensure the present and the future of our sport.

As a bettor I want a level playing field, as an investor I want to be protected--and as a marketer, my lifelong profession, I want a product I can proudly and honestly promote.

With the establishment of HISA to set and enforce rules for our sport and its participants, all three of those boxes could be checked.

To consumers under 40, the most important trait a brand can possess is "Trustworthiness". It is at the core of building a relationship with a consumer. I would venture to say racing would score near the bottom of the sporting world with this next generation of owners and bettors.

No amount of advertising dollars can cure the damage caused when a brand cannot be trusted.

Competition for the entertainment dollar has never been more difficult. While I applauded some innovation in our fight for that dollar, if we continue to be seen--by our current customers, much less potential new ones--as a sport lacking fundamental safety and integrity, the clock will continue to run down on Thoroughbred racing.

The ongoing growth and acceptance of sports betting is a major opportunity for racing. And the more our brand is seen as doing everything we can to regulate and ensure integrity, the better our chances at getting a bigger piece of the sports wagering pie.

We have our best chance to change with the implementation and full industry support of HISA.

Uniting different interests and regulating any sport is never easy. And there will be bumps along the way that comes with any effort of this magnitude. But they can and will be addressed.

Watching the Chiefs versus Eagles on Sunday should remind us--that uniformity and proper regulation can truly lead to "Super" things. The NFL is certainly not perfect, but their journey to becoming the dominant sport in America can be traced partially to their willingness to unite and better regulate their game.

I urge anyone who desires a better future for our sport to support the efforts of HISA.

Kelly Armer appointed Executive Director of THE TRF Edited Press Release

The Thoroughbred Retirement Foundation (TRF) Board of Directors announced the appointment of Kelly Armer as Executive Director following the forthcoming retirement of Pat Stickney. Assuming her new role Mar. 1, she will be based in the TRF administrative offices in Saratoga Springs, New York.

Armer served 24 years at the Saratoga YMCA where she served as COO for 15 years. More recently, she held the position of Development and Foundation Director for Saratoga Bridges, the largest nonprofit organization in New York State serving people with intellectual and developmental disabilities and their families.

After having retired twice, Stickney accepted the position of TRF’s Executive Director in 2019 and is now stepping down to return to her previous role as TRF’s Chief Financial Officer in a part-time capacity.

Patrick H. Mackay, TRF’s Board Chair said, “Kelly is an ideal fit to lead the TRF, possessing strong leadership, marketing, and development experience to help us achieve our mission of saving retired racehorses from possible neglect, abuse and slaughter. Her powerful community involvement with disadvantaged populations models the compassion of our Second Chances Programs which provide vocational training to incarcerated individuals in caring for retired racehorses, allowing them to go on to careers as farriers, vet assistants, and caretakers after their release.”

KEEP ANNOUNCES NEW BOARD MEMBERS Edited Press Release

The Kentucky Equine Education Project (KEEP) Board of Directors voted to add three individuals to the board Friday, Feb. 3. The new board members are:

- Hallie Hardy - Executive Director of Horse Country
- Kim Smith - Founder and Executive Director of Second Stride and Owner and Operator of Moserwood Farms
- Rob Tribbett - Vice President of the Consignors and Commercial Breeders Association and General Manager of Watercress Farm

Additionally, the KEEP Board of Directors elected Shannon Cobb to serve as vice chair of the board. Cobb is the COO/CFO of the Red Mile in Lexington, KY. Cobb joins returning Board Chair Case Clay in the leadership of the organization.

The KEEP Board of Directors also welcomed three new representative members: Mindy Coleman, Jockeys’ Guild; Conor Lucas, Revolutionary Racing; and Gerry Duffy, Kentucky Thoroughbred Farm Managers’ Club.

The board also recently voted to amend the organization’s by-laws to create an Emeritus Advisory Committee, comprised of original KEEP founding members. This committee will meet annually to review the work of KEEP, discuss industry challenges and continually evaluate the relevancy and direction of the organization. This committee will hold its inaugural meeting in June.

SOTTSASS COLT LEADS THE WAY FOR BARODA STUD AT GOFFS FEBRUARY SALE

A yearling colt by Sottsass topped Wednesday’s session | Goffs

PRIZE-MONEY BOOST FOR 63 MAIDEN AND NOVICE RACES IN THE UK

The programming of over 60 high-value 2023 developmental races was announced by the British Horseracing Authority (BHA) on Wednesday.

Consisting of maidens and novices with purses between £30,000-£50,000, the races will be funded by the BHA, Darley, Juddmonte, and the hosting racecourses. The objective of the prize-money boost is two-fold, with the aims of supporting horses at the beginning of their careers combined with supporting the domestic breeding industry and ensuring more quality young horses are retained to race in the UK. This initiative is intended to be the first step on the path towards a substantial enhancement of the values of Flat maiden and novice races, with discussions ongoing about further improvements for 2024 and beyond.

The races, run over a range of racecourses both large and small across Britain, are as follows:

- 20 x £30,000 2yo restricted maiden and novice races: supported by Juddmonte.
- 21 x £30,000 2yo open maiden and novice races: supported by the BHA Development Fund.
- 22 x £30,000-£50,000 3yo/3yo+ open maiden and novice races: supported by Darley and the BHA Development Fund.

By Brian Sheerin

Baroda Stud were responsible for two of the three six-figure lots on day one of the Goffs February Sale, including the €115,000 top lot, a colt by Sottsass (Ire), who was purchased by Tally-Ho Stud.

Of the 2017 lots offered, 128 were sold, which represented a clearance rate of 59% and an aggregate spend of €2,056,250. The average for day one of first sale for 2023 at Goffs was €16,064 with Cox explaining that the nice horses had no trouble in finding new homes.

He said, “A few people said to me that the horses we had here stood out. The Sottsass was a good, straightforward colt who had good X-rays and a good scope.” Cont. p3
The £250,000 Tattersalls Craven Royal Ascot/Group 1 Bonus has been renewed by Tattersalls for 2023.

Beginning on May 1, jockeys may only hit their horses four times with the whip in both Flat and jumps races in France.

A 5% share in Group 2 winner Old Flame (GB) (Invincible Spirit {Ire}) was purchased for A$70,000 out of the Inglis Digital February (Early) Sale by Chatsworth Farm.
He added, "He was a homebred of China Horse Club and sold very well to Tally-Ho Stud. He'd plenty of fans—he had six or seven vets and there was plenty of action on him."

Baroda offered 11 horses on Wednesday, of which nine were sold to the tune of €321,000 at an average of €35,667. They included another China Horse Club homebred by New Bay (GB) (lot 186), knocked down to Camas Park for €85,000, and a Magna Grecia (Ire) filly (lot 200) snapped up by MAB Agency for €58,000.

Cox added, "The New Bay was another homebred by China Horse Club and the sire is flying so he definitely attracted plenty of attention before selling to Camas Park. The Magna Grecia filly was lovely. She's a homebred by the Niarchos family and the half-sister [Burning Topic (Ger) (Ulysses {Ire})] is doing well in France."

He added, "This is a sale where, if you put a good foal in here, it will stand out and sell well. We're happy with how the day went."

Rogues Snap Up Night Of Thunder Colt

One of the major subplots to the 2022 sale season was the strength of Night Of Thunder (Ire)'s progeny at public auction and the Rogue's Gallery Syndicate, best known for owning listed winner Rogue Millennium (Ire) (Dubawi {Ire}), gave €110,000 for a colt by the Darley sire.

The Night Of Thunder colt was consigned by Ringfort Stud and signed for by the syndicate's Tony Elliott, who was standing alongside bloodstock agent Billy Jackson-Stops. Elliott revealed that lot 109 would be offered for resale later in the year.

He said, "This horse has been bought to pinhook. We had three for pinhooking last year and we've three this year as well. We've got some nice horses." Cont. p4

Elliott added, "We thought he was the standout and it was exactly what we wanted to give for him. That would have been our last bid I reckon.

"We’re really pleased to get him because he’s a lovely-looking horse and, being by Night Of Thunder, he could be anything. Sometimes we buy them back into the syndicate, which we did last year with a Zoustar (Aus).

"If we really like this lad and he’s going the right way we could look at buying him back into the syndicate. There’s two syndicates--a pinhooking syndicate and a racing one. We’ve got some nice horses for the coming years."

Shared Wish For Shamrock Thoroughbreds And Team Valor

The Joseph O’Brien-trained Dundalk winner Tosen Wish (Ire) (New Bay (GB)) (lot 35) provided some early interest when selling for €100,000 to Shamrock Thoroughbreds and Team Valor.

Tosen Wish overcame a 469-day absence to win a seven-furlong handicap off 82 at Dundalk last week, justifying 9-4 favouritism in the process.

The 4-year-old, who is now two from three, boasts a rating of 89 and will be aimed at a turf campaign by Ado McGuinness, according to the trainer’s assistant Stephen Thorne.

He said, "Tosen Wish won well on the polytrack at Dundalk last week. He’d been off for a good while but we made plenty of enquiries about him and put the picture together and I think he’s a nice lightly-raced horse moving forward. We’ve partnered up with Team Valor on this one so it is an exciting new partnership and hopefully he will be lucky for us."

Asked how the new partnership with Barry Irwin’s Team Valor came about, Thorne added, “We made contact with him and we’ve had a few conversations with him. He’s obviously seen the success Ado has had on the track. He’s a dual Group 1-winning trainer now and we’re delighted to have Team Valor on board. We were waiting to find the right type of horse to pitch to Barry and he obviously liked him. He was a standout at this sale by a mile. I thought we’d get him a little cheaper but there was strong competition in the ring. We’ve no major plans but I think he’ll be a nice horse for the turf.”

Tosen Wish was consigned by Castlebridge, who also offered the placed Arabian Legend (Ire) (Night Of Thunder {Ire}) (lot 37), sold for €48,000 to Italian owner Mr. Ciampoli to be trained by Grizzetti Galoppo.

Another horse with form, the Cormac Farrell-trained and consigned Seven Hills (Ire) (Camacho {GB}) (lot 40C), who placed a couple of times at Dundalk, sold for €40,000 to the New Racing Factory.

Walk In The Park Colt Comes Up Trumps

The Flat-bred weanlings may have dominated but once again the progeny of Walk In The Park (Ire) proved to be in high demand with Coolmore’s Gerry Aherne going to secure a well-bred colt (lot 209) by the sire from Thistledown Stud.

The colt is out of a sister to Felix Desjy (Fr) (Maresca Sorrento {Fr}), a classy performer for Gigginstown House Stud and Gordon Elliott at one point, and was the highest-priced National Hunt-bred lot through the ring on Wednesday.

The highest-value races will be held over longer distances, in an effort to continue the production of quality stayers in Britain, while other races will have additional prize-money available for a range of horses, including less expensive horses and more affordable homebreds, also providing a boost for smaller owners and breeders. The full list of 63 races can be viewed here.

Richard Wayman, Chief Operating Officer for the BHA, said, “Well-funded development races provide an opportunity to boost returns to owners in the early stages of their horse’s career, thereby potentially supporting the yearling market and, in doing so, assisting breeders at all levels.

“Juddmonte and Darley have been huge supporters of British Racing for decades and we are extremely grateful to them both for their financial assistance towards supporting this important part of the race programme. We look forward to working with them and other parties so that we can build on this significant first step in future years.” Cont. p7

Douglas Erskine Crum, CEO of Juddmonte, said, “We are delighted to be supporting this well targeted BHA initiative to enhance the competitiveness of the British racing and breeding industries. It is an effective kick-start of a long-term plan to enhance prize money substantially for developmental races, with all the benefits that will follow for breeders and owners.

“It is the right place to start for the British racing industry to become more competitive with other major breeding and racing jurisdictions around the world and to support our own breeders and owners.”

Sam Bullard, Director of Stallions for Darley, said, “For many years Darley has worked to support breeders through sponsorship and this new development fund initiative is doing just that, as well as setting a new improved prize-money level for maiden races.

“This, combined with our contribution to the EBF, demonstrates how we can work together for the benefit of racing and are delighted to be involved.”

He added, “The bonuses further enhance the appeal of a sale which produces a consistent flow of top-class 2-year-olds, with last year’s sale producing twice as many group/listed performers as any other 2022 European breeze up sale as well as two Classic winners in Native Trail and G1 1000 Guineas winner Cachet (Ire) (Aclaim {Ire}).

“Running alongside the ever-popular £15,000 Tattersalls Craven Breeze-Up Bonus, the multiple bonuses reward numerous owners and as Native Trail demonstrated, the prospect of an owner winning multiple Tattersalls Craven Breeze-Up Bonuses is very real.”

FRENCH WHIP USE REDUCED BY ONE STRIKE BEGINNING ON MAY 1

The number of strikes with the whip a jockey is allowed to use over jumps and on the Flat in France has been reduced from five to four beginning on May 1, France Galop announced on Wednesday.

There will be an educational and transitional period from Mar. 1 to Apr. 30 to allow jockeys to acclimate to the new regulations. The sanctions currently in place regarding overuse of the whip will be applied through Apr. 30. The aim is to gradually reduce the use of the whip, and the system will be reviewed at the end of 2023.

The following are specifications that apply to the manner and the number of times a whip can be used:

- Using the whip on the shoulder or neck of the horse when the jockey does not have both hands on the reins counts towards the permitted number of strikes.
- It is at the discretion of the stewards to decide if a jockey has used his/her whip clearly and unequivocally for safety reasons (correcting the horse’s trajectory) rather than misused it.
- The stewards will consider it a misuse offence (according to article 171 of the Racing Code) when a jockey uses his/her whip one or more times even though his/her mount was no longer able to improve or was out of contention (it is a misuse even if the jockey has used his/her whip below the authorised number).
- Using the whip above shoulder height is considered a misuse offence.

Increased penalties will come into effect on May 1, as well, with specific penalties applying to group races. For the full details regarding penalties for whip offences after the new rules come into effect, and for more information on the new rules, please go to the France Galop website.

EARR OF TYRONE (IRE) (g, 5, Australia (GB)--Affirmative (GB), by Pivotal (GB)), last year’s Listed Martin Molony S. winner and Ebor H. third, had joined William Haggas and lined up for this Fast-Track Qualifier for the £150,000 All-Weather Marathon Championships under a three-pound penalty for new connections. Enjoying the perfect stalking trip in third against the rail, the 3-1 joint-favourite was unleashed by James Doyle passing two out and soon had command en route to an authoritative 2 1/4-length success from Berkshire Rocco (Fr) (Sir Percy (GB)). “It looked as though he really enjoyed the trip tonight,” Maureen Haggas said. “He is off to Australia and goes into quarantine tomorrow and I think William wanted to find whether we go for the mile-and-a-half race [Tancred S.] or the two-mile race [Sydney Cup]. Looking at that, he will probably go straight for the Sydney Cup and you’d hope he would have a nice chance. From what we have seen of him, he is an easy-going, straightforward sort of horse with a nice personality.” The dam, who has a yearling filly by Saxon Warrior (Jpn) to come, is a daughter of the G1 Nassau S. winner Favourable Terms (GB) (Selkirk) who is also the second dam of the dual G3 Prix du Petit Couvert scorer Berneuil (Ire) (Lope De Vega (Ire)). Wound up from the top of the straight, the 2-5 favourite was in front two out but had to work to ward off Polemon (GB) (Frankel (GB)) and proved equal to the task to prevail by a neck.
